Artist Joan Miró i Ferrà

This is a picture of Joan Miró i Ferrà. He was a Spanish painter, sculptor, and ceramicist.

When Miró came to England he most wanted to visit London Zoo. He was invited by one of the chief zoo keepers called Desmond Morris who asked Miró which animals he would most like to see. Miró replied "Large birds, snakes and creatures of the night." Desmond gave Miró a hornbill to feed and it gently took a grape from his fingers.

This is one of his paintings, "Oiseau Zephyr" 1956

2G have enjoyed learning about Miro and his style of artwork. We learned what surrealism was and recreated our own Miro inspired pieces of artwork.

Have a look at our wonderful artwork based on Miro.

We think the doodles on the watercolour wash backdrop make them look like our line drawing creatures are flying through space!
